

Trees are the source of life. If I were a tree, I would have loved to be a fruit tree in a garden. I would have been the son of mother Nature. I would spread my branches in all directions. I would be so helpful to everyone on the earth because I would give oxygen. I would give fruits to all birds and men.

A hungry man could have taken my fruits to fill his stomach. I would be able to see the nests of the birds and their babies closely and I would become their home. Tired people would come and sit under me for some time and save themselves from harsh sunlight. They all would love me and bless me. I could listen to these people and their talks. I would laugh on their jokes and would have cried for anything sad that I would hear. I would listen to a lot of stories and songs when people would pass by me.

Children would love to climb on me and I would make them happy when they would play around me or swing on my branches. I would be seeing so far easily because of my height.
